The John Birch Society

Author: Peter Rykowski Date: January 13, 2025

Oppose Oregon Pro-ranked-choice Voting Bill HB 3166

Members of the Oregon Legislative Assembly are seeking to pass legislation that would implement ranked-choice voting (RCV) in the state. The Legislative Assembly must reject RCV and the detrimental effects it would have on election integrity.

House Bill 3166 (HB 3166) would implement a "final five" jungle-primary system where all candidates, regardless of party, would appear on the same primary ballot. Only the five best-performing candidates would advance to the general election. This bill is a major step toward RCV, since RCV supporters advocate combining RCV with a "final five" system.

This bill comes after Oregon voters rejected a ballot measure that would have implemented RCV outright.

RCV threatens election integrity and undermines the electorate's ability to choose the best candidate in elections. The May 10, 2021 issue of The New American magazine explains how ranked-choice voting works and why it would harm U.S. elections:

[It] is a complicated system that requires voters to assign a rank to each candidate on the ballot, regardless of whether they support that candidate. If no candidate is ranked first by a majority of voters, the lowest-performing candidate is eliminated. Voters who gave their highest ranking to the eliminated candidate then have their second choice counted instead. This process repeats until one candidate receives a majority.

As implied above, ranked-choice voting can lead to candidates with little genuine support winning elections. The system confuses voters, distracts from policy issues, and forces voters to vote for candidates they otherwise would not support. In the United States, ranked-choice voting was enacted in Maine in 2016 and Alaska in 2020. These efforts, primarily backed by liberals, led to Republican U.S. Representative from Maine Bruce Poliquin losing to Democrat Jared Golden in 2018 despite winning a plurality in the first round. Meanwhile, some political analysts believe that Alaska's new system, which also eliminates party primaries, will enable liberal Republican Senator Lisa Murkowski's reelection in 2022 despite her unpopularity among Republicans.

The John Birch Society

Author: Peter Rykowski Date: January 13, 2025

With any voting system, the more complicated it is, the greater the risk of manipulation strategies or fraud. Additionally, RCV would make hand counts much more difficult, creating an excuse for computerized vote counting. By contrast, genuine election integrity must involve hand-counted paper ballots.

Contact your state representative and senator and urge them to oppose HB 3166 and any other bill that implements ranked-choice voting in any way. Instead, tell them to enact measures that strengthen election integrity in Oregon.