

The Fifth and Sixth Amendments of the Bill of Rights deal with general jurisprudence. The 5th is best known for the fact that a person cannot be compelled to testify against himself without reprisal. The 5th Amendment sets the stage for the 6th Amendment where a person has the right to a fair and speedy trial. Join Arthur R. Thompson as he examines both amendments and why they are so important.

Take Action

1. Lecture Series: The Constitution is the Solution
2. Lecture Series: Understand the Bill of Rights
3. Legislative Alerts: Hold your elected officials accountable