CLASS TWELVE: THE NEED TO ORGANIZE

The John Birch Society | JBS.org

In this class, the focus shifts to the absolute necessity of disciplined organization among patriots. Drawing on Edmund Burke's warning that "when bad men combine, the good must associate," it demonstrates that concern alone is no strategy. This class also warns against wasting patriotic energy on fruitless or counterproductive causes, stresses the danger of an Article V convention, and emphasizes that we must enforce the Constitution we already have. Finally, it calls for grassroots educational organization as the true means of resistance.
