Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Founding Americans pointed to these as unalienable rights and formed governments to protect these rights. However, many concerned Americans point out that the federal government seems to be forcing its way into more and more aspects of their lives.

If you're among those that are frustrated with politics as usual and are looking for a plan to maximize freedom, then you're invited to learn more about The John Birch Society. The organization was formed to accomplish less government, more responsibility and — with God's help — a better world.

View this 16-minute video that explains the organization, has interviews from members, and discusses how you can help shape a better today and tomorrow for you and future generations.
