Attorney General Jeff Sessions announced that the Department of Justice will have to certify local jurisdictions so they can be in compliance with federal immigration laws in order to receive grant money.

This means funding for sanctuary cities, will be affected. There are between 11 and 30 million undocumented immigrants in America. Drying up the incentives to be an illegal alien would dramatically cut the flow to this country, and would certainly see many more use legal means to become part of this liberty experiment. Cutting funds to sanctuary cities is a small, but logical first step.
