“Going nuclear” highlights a much bigger problem that faces American jurisprudence: corruption of the system by political influence. Shouldn’t judges simply apply the law as written? Instead of interpreting the law, shouldn’t they just obey it?

In this installment of our weekly “Analysis Behind the News,” we look at how our justice system has morphed into an unwieldy animal creating extraordinarily bad precedence as judges continue to pile on their opinions of interpretation that involves their own personal proclivities and political agenda. Will Judge Gorsuch be any different?
