

You can certainly tell it's election season. A time for candidates to make many promises they can't or won't deliver, and a time for big government to try to prove its worth, almost like it's some sort of audition trying to make their guy look good.

A case in point, bird flu is back, and big government is trying very hard to prove to you that it knows what it's doing and that you should listen and obey—no matter of its track record with Covid. We'll dive into this today and help you connect the dots to its end game and what you can do about it. All in today's episode of Analysis Behind the News.
