While last week we focused on what we saw wrong with some of Trump's nominees, let's look at a bright spot: head of the EPA. Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt has been at loggerheads with the Obama administration during his tenure, especially over the EPA's regulation of and attack on industry. If Mr. Pruitt gets Senate confirmation, will he use his position to undo government, instead of doing something? Will the EPA be dismantled or is this a smokescreen to disguise the agenda of globalists?
